CALCULATING ESCROW AMOUNTS

An escrow account is an account where we hold funds used to pay your property taxes, homeowner's insurance, and mortgage insurance premiums (if applicable) throughout the year. In order to determine what your payment will be the following year, we must analyze your loan.

Here's how we calculate your escrow amounts:

We first take a look at all escrow payments received, as well as all tax and insurance items paid out during the past year or from your last analysis.

Next, we estimate the tax and insurance items that we will pay for the next year and divide the projected total by 12. This will determine what your new monthly escrow payment will be. If your loan has mortgage insurance, this is added to your monthly escrow payment as well.

Now that we know what your monthly escrow payment will be, we project your monthly escrow balances over the next year, to show what is being deposited and paid out.

Lastly, we compare the lowest escrow balance month to the required minimum balance (cushion) to determine if there will be a shortage or overage.

A cushion helps cover unexpected increases in taxes and/or insurance. Lenders are allowed to maintain a 2-month cushion by state and federal law. The cushion is calculated by adding your yearly escrow items and dividing the total by 12. This amount is then multiplied by 2.
